Location

🌿 Explore the Untamed Wonder of the Tuli Block, Botswana

Tucked away in Botswana's lesser-traveled eastern corner, the Tuli Block is a hidden gem where rugged beauty meets unforgettable wildlife. This stretch of land along the Limpopo River is a mosaic of towering sandstone outcrops, ancient baobabs, and endless savanna, making it a dream destination for nature lovers, photographers, and conservation-minded travelers.

Here, three countries—Botswana, South Africa, and Zimbabwe—almost kiss, and the landscape feels like something out of a storybook: think wide-open skies, red earth roads, and elephants wandering across ancient migration paths.

🐘 Why You'll Love It

- It's one of Botswana's best-kept secrets: fewer crowds, more raw wilderness.
- The wildlife here is incredible — you might see lion, leopard, hyena, giraffe, and massive herds of elephant.
- Bird lovers will be in paradise with hundreds of species fluttering through the riverine forests and bushveld.
- The region is rich in history and legend, with rock art sites and traditional villages telling the story of time.

🌟 What Makes It Special

Unlike Botswana's famous Okavango Delta or Chobe, the Tuli Block offers a more intimate, off-the-beaten-track safari experience — perfect for travelers who want to connect deeply with the land, its people, and its wildlife.

Volunteer Tasks

Your daily journey will involve approximately six hours of volunteer work, divided between early morning and late afternoon tasks to steer clear of the midday heat. During lunch and the early afternoon, you have free time to indulge in reading, relaxing, playing games, or even taking a siesta! For those more active individuals seeking less downtime, there are consistently available activities around the camp, such as downloading camera trap data, identifying spoor, and capturing images of birds and insects for identikits.

The late afternoons typically culminate with a breathtaking sunset atop a rocky outcrop, and if the weather permits, evenings are spent enjoying the night sky around a campfire.

1. Research:
   - Conduct mammal and bird surveys
   - Study migration patterns throughout the year
   - Develop elephant identikits
   - Monitor camera traps and document nocturnal activities
   - Contribute valuable data to the broader management planning of the area
2. Conservation Projects:
   - Undertake activities based on conservation needs

- Fence repair, waterhole construction, soil erosion control, and more
- Play a vital role in protecting and maintaining the wilderness area

3. Wildlife Observation:
   - Observe wildlife in their natural habitat
   - Encounter herds of elephant, zebra and giraffe, with opportunities to track leopard, lion and hyena.
   - Immerse yourself in the sounds and sights of the African bush
4. Sleep-Outs:
   - Experience the magic of Africa's starlit sky
   - Witness breathtaking sunsets over the plains
   - Fall asleep under the vast African sky, listening to the sounds of nearby creatures
5. Discover:
   - Learn to identify species in the African bush
   - Engage in spoor identification and cast-making
   - Participate in conservation debates and bird identification sessions
   - Absorb the silence and vastness of the surrounding landscapes

Weather in Botswana

Botswana generally experiences a subtropical climate with distinct wet and dry seasons.

- Dry Season (March to October):
  - This is the dry season with warm days and cooler evenings. During the winter months (June-August), temperatures can drop significantly at night and early morning. This is a lovely time of the year for wildlife viewing as animals tend to gather around waterholes.
- Green Season (November to February):
  - This is the summer season with higher temperatures and the welcome of summer rains. While there can be rainy days over this time, afternoon rainstorms are most common, bringing a welcome relief to the heat. The landscape becomes lush and green, and this is when many of the baby animals arrive.
